ENSAAMA Olivier de Serres hosted the first «Science and Cuisine» meeting under the patronage of chemist Hervé This, the «father» of molecular cuisine. The meeting was the culmination of a competition launched in October 2005 at the Palais de la Découverte.

It was entitled «discovering additives» and gathered more than 250 people (students and teachers from culinary schools, culinary design schools, food research schools, chefs, cooks, confectioners, and lovers of molecular gastronomy). They were asked to make preparations showing «an innovative spirit of culinary and artistic creation».
